Origin Spotlight - Java

Java is almost entirely of volcanic origin; it contains no fewer than thirty-eight mountains forming an east-west spine which have at one time or another been active volcanoes. Further mountains and highlands help to split the interior into a series of relatively isolated regions suitable for cultivation. The island of Java illustrates a tectonic feature called an island arc which is a set of volcanoes that grow from the sea floor to many thousands of feet above sea level. In the case of Java the volcanoes have coalesced to form a large single island. Seen in the photo are nearly a dozen active stratovolcanoes. Deep blue water of the Indian Ocean to the south contrasts to the sediment laden waters of the Java Sea to the north.
