Origin Spotlight - Costa Rica

Coffee came to Costa Rica in the 1790's. The brotherhood of coffee farmers, both large and small, formed the basis that allowed Costa Rica to become the first Central American country to establish coffee as an industry. The first export was in 1820 to Colombia, then 1823 to Chile and to England in 1854.

Our Costa Rican coffee comes from the Tarrazu region, the highest altitude region and is rated SHB (strictly hard bean). This region is generally considered the best for coffee growing. We have also tried coffee from the Tres Rios region at times when the Tarrazu has not been available and have found it to be a nice alternative.

Summer is over. As I write this in late August, my children are back in school and my thoughts turn to fundraising coffee. In addition to the normal method of school children selling coffee to friends and relatives ( we offer that too ) please consider online affiliate fundraising for your school or non profit organization. It's so easy. Just fill out the single page form and have your web person attach the link to your web site and E-mail/newsletter. Earn 10% on the total coffee purchase, all done online. No handling orders, money or delivery. It's working for you 24/7. Here's the sign up form.
